DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

As per claim 1, the preamble appears to be misdescriptive as if the function of the claimed floating point unit is to generate a correction signal and an inverted leading zero signal. Further, it is also indefinite as to what the "correction signal", the "inverted leading zero signal", and their functions are. On lines 12-13, the phrase "the exponent output value" lacks a proper antecedent basis. Further, the claim is incomplete as it only provides intermediate results. The inputs, the function and the final result of the floating point unit are also unclear.

As per claims 3, line 4, "the exponent value", should be -- the exponent output value --.

As per claim 13, it is indefinite as to what the "leading zero signal", line 3, and its function are. Claims 29 and 30 also has the same problem.

As per claim 28, "said error", line 4, lacks a proper antecedent basis. Further, the claim is incomplete as it only provides intermediate results, and the error compensating is unclear.

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

3. Claims 1-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Art Unit: 2193

Claims 13-28 are directed to a computer implemented method of computation. Claims 1-12 and 31 merely recite a computer implementing the method. Claim 29 are directed to a medium having instruction for implementing the method. In order for a computer related invention that is directed to such a computer implemented method of computation, a computer implementing a computation or a computer readable medium having instructions for implementing a computation, to be statutory, the claimed invention must accomplish a practical application. That is the claimed invention must transform an article or physical object to a different state or thing, or produce a useful, concrete and tangible result. State Street, 149 F.3d at 1373-74, 47 USPQ2d at 1601-02. Also see "Interim Guidelines for Examination of Patent Applications for Patent Subject Matter Eligibility", OG Notices: 22 November 2005. It is clear from claims 1-19 that the claims merely involve calculations and manipulations of data in performing computations. The inputs are numbers and the output are also number. The claimed invention does not transform an article or physical object to a different state or thing. The result produced by the invention is merely numerical values without a practical application recited in the claims to make the result useful, concrete and tangible. Therefore, the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter as the claims fail to accomplish a practical application.

In addition, claim 29 does not recite the medium being computer readable. The invention is also non statutory as being non-functional descriptive material.

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
